

Moving out so you can move in

After building their businesses into major success stories, three long-standing tenants, Watershed West, Pure Hacking and Pacific Teleports, recently moved to larger premises.

These departures make way for new businesses to join the SSHED and benefit from our first class office space, as well as business guidance and support.

All three business owners agreed that the SSHED was a great stepping stone for their business and helped to keep office costs low while they built revenue streams.

Want to move out of home?

If you're a home based business looking to employ staff, then the SSHED could be ideal for you.

Each office is completely set up and ready to go. Weekly office rents start from $255 and that includes:

- a computer loaded with the latest business software
- furniture and phones
- internet access
- web hosting
- daily computer back-ups and more.

There are no leases to sign and instead it's a simple month-to-month agreement.

Office space is now available. Like to take a tour or find out more? Contact: Craig Doyle, SSHED Manager

Spatial Tapestry launches new product

Spatial Tapestry has launched a new software solution, Topo Manager, which automatically adjusts the digital cadastre used in mapping technology. Topo Manager is part of a software suite that users have already reported saves them between $50,000 and $250,000 in staff and computing costs.

Utilities go dotty

Many utility companies have a huge copper theft problem with copper being stolen and sold for scrap. The theft of this copper can affect train services, electricity supplies and phone lines.

Companies such as Integral Energy, Alinta Gas and Energy Australia are turning to Data Dot technology and marking all their copper with DataDots to help prevent theft.
